Prince William to marry Kate Middleton

London - Prince William is to marry Kate Middleton. The couple announced their engagement on Tuesday 16th November. The prince said, "The timing is right now. We are both very, very happy and I am glad that I have done it." He has given Kate his mother's ring. He said, "It's very special to me." He added "Kate's very special to me now, it was right to put the two together." Prince William said giving Kate his mother Diana's dazzling blue 18 carat sapphire and diamond engagement ring was "my way of making sure my mother didn't miss out on today and the excitement". Kate said that joining the Royal Family was a 'daunting prospect' but added, "Hopefully I'll take it in my stride and William's a great teacher so hopefully he'll be able to help me along the way". The couple, both 28, got engaged in October whilst on holiday in Kenya. The couple met while they were students at St Andrews University in Fife, Scotland. Miss Middleton added: "We have been going out a long time. We had spoken about our future and it just seemed the natural step for both of us."

Prime Minister David Cameron said he had received the news in a call from Buckingham Palace during a cabinet meeting at Number 10. The news was greeted with "a great cheer" and a "banging on the table" from fellow ministers. The Queen is said to be absolutely delighted her grandson is finally to be married. Miss Middleton is the eldest child of businessman Michael Middleton and his wife Carol. She was raised in a modern five-bedroom detached house in the Berkshire village of Bucklebury and her family, who are self-made millionaires, run a mail order toy and party goods company. William followed tradition and asked his girlfriend's father for her hand. The royal wedding is planned for either the spring or summer of 2011 though the ceremony could be on August 13th. The couple will live in North Wales once they are husband and wife. Prince William's father Prince Charles joked: "They have been practising long enough". The bride's parents were said to be "absolutely delighted". The future princess known as 'Waity Katy', who did not have a proper job, has had to wait eight years for her prince. She has now abandoned her nickname of Kate and will now be known as Catherine. Prince William said he was "Massively excited" about the engagement. It was a splendid day for the British monarchy.
