Paris horror – Islamic State claim responsibility – on Friday 13th

France was in a nationwide state of emergency on Saturday following Friday night's attack in Paris from Islamic State. It comes just 10 months after the Charlie Hebdo magazine attack where 12 people were killed.

The latest terrorist incident was the worst such attack Paris has experienced since World War II. The French President Monsieur Hollande called the coordinated attacks "an act of war."

ISIS has claimed responsibility. They said eight ISIS militants wearing explosives belts and armed with machine guns attacked precisely selected targets in Paris.

So far, the death toll has reached 129, though this figure is expected to rise significantly. More than 180 others were injured. Seven of the eight terrorists were killed in suicide bombings.

The French president was at the Stade de France, where France was playing Germany in a football friendly. Mr Hollande was quickly evacuated. He immediately wowed a ruthless response to the attacks. He instantly reinstated border controls, as well as declaring three days of national mourning.

The attacks took place at the Bataclan Concert Hall where, so far, 89 people were killed. At the Stade de France four people were killed outside the sports stadium. At least 14 people were killed by a militant brandishing an AK-47 machine gun at the site of the restaurant Le Petit Cambodge that is located in Rue Bichat, in the 10th District of France. Another 19 people were killed outside a bar called La Belle Equipe on the Rue de Charonne in the 11th District. Four people died on the Avenue de la Republique, which is also in the 10th District of Paris.
